

With years of experience representing an international retailer on the development of over 100 properties, Kelly guides clients through every aspect of the real estate, land use and construction related components of a project. Kelly leverages this multifaceted experience to counsel clients from project inception to completion, and works closely with members of executive leadership and in-house counsel to develop a strategy that includes identifying, understanding and minimizing inherent risks.

Real Estate

Kelly's real estate experience includes preparing and negotiating easement and development agreements; performing real estate due diligence for mergers and acquisitions; preparing and negotiating commercial purchase and sale agreements for real property; and negotiating commercial leases for tenants and landlords.

Commercial Lending

Based on her years of industry experience, Kelly provides a "lenders perspective" when representing financial institutions and other borrowers in complex commercial lending transactions. This experience includes handling all real estate and land use aspects associated with a loan to secure real property.

Land Use

She regularly represents land owners and developers in reviewing and analyzing municipal zoning ordinances, building codes, and state and local law relative to project entitlements and zoning matters. Kelly's land-use counsel also includes ensuring State Environmental Quality Review Act compliance and regulatory approval from state and federal agencies.

Kelly's clients include, among others, international, national and local retailers, development companies, real estate investment trusts, financial institutions, professional service providers, renewable energy companies, municipalities, utility companies, and health care providers.
